

ALL SIDES OF THE WIND

One filmmaker's personal quest for answers takes him to the heart of the debate over industrial wind energy, exploring the competing arguments and the people whose lives are affected.

Director and host Stuart Cresswell sets out on a personal quest to understand the arguments for and against industrial wind energy. Taking viewers inside a debate that brings questions of renewable energy, landscape and community into sharp focus, the film explores the contrasting perspectives surrounding wind power. Rather than offering easy answers, All Sides of the Wind invites audiences to consider the complexities of the issue and the different viewpoints that shape it.
